THE FARM TRIBUNE

VOL. XIV, NO. 7 — PUBLISHED WEEKLY — PORTERVILLE, CALIFORNIA — August 4, 1960

ONE OF the spectacular rooms deep in the interior of Haughton's cave, near Balch park, is shown in the above photo, taken nearly 25 years ago by Elmer J. Hubbell, of Porterville, during an exploration trip into the cave with a group of Porterville students. For many years there has been speculation as to the value of this cave as a tourist attraction if a safe entrance was developed.

Development of Mountain Home Area Again Brings Up Possibility Of Opening Haughton Cave For Tourists

SPRINGVILLE, Aug. 4 — With development of the Balch park and Mountain home areas taking on new impetus, the question again comes up as to whether or not the opening of Haughton's cave near Balch park as a tourist attraction is feasible.

Certainly, the interior of the cave has spectacular beauty, but at present getting in and out is a tough job. Before it could be opened for tourists, it is likely that a new entrance would have to be made.

At any rate, Floyd L. Otter, manager of the Mountain Home State forest, who has done considerable historical research on the area, has written an article on Edward W. Haughton, after whom the cave was named, in the current issue of Los Tulares, quarterly bulletin of the Tulare County Historical society.

Because of its historical interest, we are reprinting this article, also a story from an old edition of The Farm Tribune concerning exploration of the cave.

HAUGHTON STORY TOLD BY HISTORIAN

By Floyd L. Otter
Manager of Mountain Home State Forest in March, 1960 Issue of Los Tulares

Edward W. Haughton did not get around very much socially, but he did get around in the woods. And one day, probably while looking for a good piece of redwood timberland, he found a big limestone cave in a sharp little gorge at the foot of a high cliff. He almost failed to come back from that trip and people remembered the story he told so well that they called the cave Haughton's Cave.

Haughton's story, as remembered by Elster, is that he went down into the cave (it can be entered only by an almost vertical shaft) with only pitch-wood torches for light. Between the smoke of the torch which almost suffocated him and the darkness without it he felt fortunate to get out alive. This was some time before 1884, because the Official Tulare County Map of that year shows the cave with Haughton's name. The location shown is about three-fourths mile southeast of the actual location as known today. It is barely possible that he found an entrance not known now. In the nineties, when tourists began to flock to Mountain Home, this cave was given quite a bit of publicity and Jesse Hoskins regularly took people down into it by means of fir-tree ladders made by cutting trees and leaving the branches "trimmed long" for steps.

Haughton was a bachelor and he was English. He seems to have pronounced his name "Horton". He settled on what is now known as the Bear Creek Ranch in Section 9, probably before the road was built in 1884. By the end of that year he had also acquired, probably as a "timber and stone claim", the east quarter of Section 35 including the sites of Frasier's Mill and Coburn's "upper mill" on the Coburn Fork of Bear Creek in the Mountain Home area.

He is said to have been a friend of Frank Knowles, but not of his other neighbor, John Gaffney, who, with his sister Ann, ran the half-way house or hotel at Rancheria. This is not surprising since John was as Irish as Haughton was English. And Gaffney's hogs coming the three miles up the road and getting into Haughton's garden didn't help neighborly relations. Haughton used to shoot the hogs. Mrs. Ola Hobbs tells the story that one day along about 1903, Avon Coburn found that Haughton had died at his well-

ROBERT CARLE DESCRIBES CAVE INTERIOR

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4—It was almost 25 years ago that a group of Porterville students, accompanied by Elmer J. Hubbell, then a high school and college instructor, entered and explored Haughton's cave near Balch park.

In writing of their experiences and describing the interior of the cave, Carle stated that entrance to the cave was small, only about three feet high, and before entering it was necessary to dam up a small stream that ran into the cave.

"This done, we picked up our ropes and lights and crawled down into the cave," Carle wrote. "For about 40 feet the tunnel remained low and small, then terminated in a small, vertical shaft leading downward a few feet.

"We entered this hole, feet first, then crawled through a small, rough tunnel which led out from the hole a short distance. At the end of this passage, we had about an eight-foot drop to make into a fair-sized room. At one side of this room lay a half-buried, redwood tree trunk, relic of some remote time when the entrance to the cave was much larger.

"From this room we had to crawl down about 50 or 60 feet. The drop was not straight down, but like a spiral staircase, which was so rough that it made the going very laborious . . . At the bottom of the descent we came into a much larger room.

"From this chamber we followed a winding, sharply descending passage, the floor of which was covered with a loose litter of angular rocks and stones. The rocks were not rounded, as one might expect in a stream bed.

"The walls of the tunnel were composed of fine grained limestone, verging onto marble, and of travertine, which has been deposited in very strange and grotesque forms.

"In places, the travertine resembled a draping of heavy, cream-colored velvet. The winding passage was not very long, but terminated suddenly in a perpendicular shaft. It was not exactly a shaft, but rather the top of a high room that broadened out near the floor.

"We were not able to tell the distance to the floor, as our position was too awkward to allow us to use our lights. We pushed a few rocks over the edge and listen-

FIRST WATER FOR TEA POT DOME AREA

TEA POT DOME, Aug. 4—First water is being delivered today through the new Tea Pot Dome district system to farmers in the area, with delivery coming "none too soon" since wells in the district have dropped rapidly this summer.

Orders for water have been taken for the past several days by Marjorie Meier, district secretary; and first water was pumped yesterday through the new line from the Friant Kern canal, west of the district, into the reservoir near the Tea Pot Dome service station, from where it is distributed into district lines.

Actually, the system that is now under construction has been sufficiently completed to deliver water only to the area west of the Southern Pacific railroad.

It is possible that water will be delivered into the area east of the tracks some time in the early fall.

Prospects Fair; Fire Hazard High For Deer Opening

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4—Hunter prospects will be fair for opening weekend of the early deer season in California, but they will be complicated by access problems and a high fire hazard through most of the area which ranges from southern Humboldt county to northern San Diego.

The season opens Saturday, Aug. 6, in most counties of the coastal area and in some contiguous inland counties. Bag limit is two bucks per season.

In a county-by-county report compiled by wardens and game managers, the Department of Fish and Game announced fire hazards generally will range from high to extreme. The agency cautioned hunters to take extra precautions with matches, cigarettes and camp

ABC TOURNAMENT OPENS AUGUST 19 IN PORTERVILLE

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4—California state tournament of the Amateur Baseball Congress will be played in Porterville this year, with opening game set for August 19. The Porterville Bears, who won the state championship last year, will again be strong contenders for the title. The series of tournament games, that will bring the state's top baseball teams to Porterville, will be played at Municipal field.

EVERETT CLOERS TO VISIT RUSSIA WHILE ON TRIP

SAUCELITO, Aug. 4 — Everett Cloer, Saucelito district rancher, with Mrs. Cloer, will spend 15 days in Russia during an extended trip that will take them into a number of Scandanavian, Central and Southern European countries.

The Cloers are leaving by jet plane from Los Angeles for a flight over the North pole this afternoon. Their return flight will be by way of New York city.

Pioneer Water Company Seeks Success Storage

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4 — Directors of the Pioneer Water company have started negotiations with the U.S. bureau of reclamation to secure water storage space back of Success dam during the 1961 runoff season.

Al Hilton, president of the company, reported at a meeting of directors Monday that it appears a one-year arrangement can be worked out for 1961.

He said that cost of storage space has not been determined as yet and probably will not be until the dam is completed and the Army engineers compile final cost figure. However, $1.50 per acre foot, more or less, is a "talking" figure.

Hilton said that with water storage space back of the dam, flow of

New Bartlett Park Planning To Be Discussed

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4—Plans for development of the new Bartlett park in the Tule river area immediately below Success dam will be discussed at a meeting of Porterville chamber of commerce officials and county plannnig personnel today at 3 p.m. in the chamber of commerce building.

Members of the Porterville chamber of commerce Success Area Planning committee, headed by Chet Griswold, will discuss development of Bartlett park, and other public recreation areas adjacent to Success dam and reservoir, with Ross Gaskill, of the Tulare County Planning department, and Merle Harp, Tulare county parks commissioner.

Basic objective of the chamber of commerce committee is to co-

IS THE "HIGHWAY CRUISER" A HOUSE? STATE SAYS IT IS BUT CASE IN COURT

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4—Whether or not the "sportscab" that fits on the back of pickups is technically a vehicle for human habitation, or whether it isn't, is involved in a court case filed by Donald Conley, who manufactures the "Highway Cruiser" cab at his plant south of Porterville for distribution to Ford and Chevrolet dealers.

Under provisions of a new section of the state health and safety code that became effective last September, the state division of housing maintains that the cabs constitute vehicles for human habitation, and, as a result, are demanding a $2.00 "inspection" fee on each unit, although the inspection consists only of approving construction plans, then granting authority to put the official stamp on each unit.

The state regulation defines a camp car as a vehicle designed for human habitation, which contains ed to them boom and reverberate on the way down. By the noise that was made, the depth seemed very great.

"After some deliberation, Mr. Hubbell took one of the ropes and fastened it around a projecting piece of rock, then he selected one of the lightest boys, Bill Richardson, and tied another rope around his chest. Bill was then lowered over the edge by the rope held by Mr. Hubbell, but at the same time he held onto the rope fastened above . . .

"The drop into this room was between 50 and 60 feet . . . The rest of us were let down just as Bill had been; Mr. Hubbell descended hand over hand down the fixed rope.

After describing further progress, Carle said, "a few minutes descent along a torturous passage brought us suddenly into a great cavern.

"It is hard to describe my feelings when I entered that cavern. Incredulity and amazement, at first, then awe at the great black emptiness that surrounded us. We were all very much elated at finding such a vast chamber in the heart of a mountain. The floor of the cavern sloped steeply away from the tunnel through which we had come.

"On the floor were great piles of dirt that had evidently fallen from the ceiling. Hugh boulders of travertine were scattered everywhere. Our lights made but feeble illumination in the emptiness of the room.

"We estimated that the roof of the cavern was between 300 and 450 feet from the floor, and in the lower end of the cavern, perhaps as much as 500 feet.

"The width of the cave was between 100 and 150 feet; we did not go all the way to the back, so we are not certain how long it was, however it must have been at least 500 feet.

"At the lower end of the cavern were many beautiful travertine formations. In one place, the travertine, white and sparkling as snow, seemed to flow in graceful, rounded mounds, resembling a miniature Niagara. In others, the travertine resembled the old-fashioned molasses candy, placed in thin, parallel sheets, which rang like a bell when snapped with the fingernail.

"There were many groups of small stalactites, peculiar in that they were often hollow. Further up in the cavern were large stalagmites.

"After partially exploring this cavern, we had to begin our tedious journey toward the surface. We were all quite cold by this time; the damp, humid atmosphere of the cave was far from pleasant.

"Our return journey was much slower than the journey down. Mr. Hubbell climbed up by means of the rope we had left, then he would haul us up, one at a time . . . Our fingers were so numb with cold that grasping the rope was well nigh impossible. But after several hours we finally reached the surface. We had spent nearly seven hours in the cave and most of the time was employed in ascending and descending."

In recalling the trip, Hubbell stated that at a low level of the cave, the party found an old lantern, and Richardson said there were bats in the cave. Both believe commercial development of the cave would be difficult, since the cavern is vertical rather than horizontal. A great amount of work would be necessary, it appeared, to drive a tunnel into the large cave space.

Small To Open Office For Kuchel In Sacramento

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4 — U.S. Senator Thomas H. Kuchel of California announced the transfer to Sacramento of M. F. ("Pop") Small, his administrative assistant for seven years. Small will open a state office for Kuchel September 1.

He will be replaced as administrative assistant in Washington by Ewing Hass, former deputy State controller.

Kuchel said the growing demands on him to assist statewide organizations, State and local government officials, and others in dealing with Federal agencies has necessitated reestablishing his Sacramento office.

NOBLE NELSON HONORED BY EXCHANGE CLUBS

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4 — Porterville Exchange club honored its immediate past president, Noble Nelson, with a presidential ball Saturday night, at the Elks lodge.

The evening started with a get-acquainted hour. A small rhythm combo from Buck Shaffer's Studio band started the dancing and at the same time, the wives of Exchange Club members uncovered a smorgasbord hors d'oeuvre table which was served all evening.

Exchange clubs from Arvin and Bakersfield were represented by more than 15 couples.

Nelson was presented with a bar-b-que and spit set in appreciation for his contributions to the Porterville Exchange club.

At 11 p.m., Ray Holloway, Porterville Exchange member, started an auction of the Arvin Club's banner. For some unknown reason, this banner was missing from Arvin for quite some time and turned up in Porterville. The Arvin club president and the Bakersfield president waged a heated bidding campaign with Arvin eventually winning out.

Over 50 couples were in attendance.

TIME TO GET GOING

With completion of Success dam slated for this fall, and with indications being that water storage space will be available back of the dam for the 1961 irrigation season, it behooves all ditch companies along the Tule river to get going immediately if they want to store water in 1961.

At the present time the Pioneer Water company is negotiating independently with the Bureau of Reclamation for storage, starting in 1961; certain other ditch companies have, or are, negotiating through various types of agreements with the Porterville Irrigation district and the Lower Tule Irrigation district for the handling of their water in the future.

But there are a number of ditches, that will probably be dealt with as a group, and that are members of the Tule River Water Users' association that have made no move as yet to secure water storage contracts in Success reservoir.

Time is moving along. A project — the Success dam project — that was only something to talk about just a few years ago, will become a completed reality in a few months. It would be well for representatives of all ditch interests along the Tule, below the dam, to meet and discuss mutual problems and plans if water storage contracts are to be completed in time for benefits in 1961.

AFL-CIO ANALYSIS OF PLAN FOR ORGANIZING FARM WORKERS PRESENTS FARMERS IN "NEW" LIGHT

To see ourselves as others see us?

Following is the way those persons now organizing agricultural labor in the San Joaquin valley see farms and farmers, as stated in a report by an associate of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization to the Agricultural Workers' Organizing committee, directed, in California. by Norman Smith.

Quantitatively (says this report) the problem is: organize a target quota of 150,000 agricultural workers in California; simultaneously, or in sequence, begin organizing the whole farm worker group; stay with the job till it is done.

Qualitatively, the problem is not even simply stated. An examination of the opposing forces shows that agriculture has no central nervous system, no "jugular vein."

Our principal "enemy" is a straw-man, an image. This image is the commonly accepted picture of agriculture as being made of the sturdy yeoman, the solid, earthy American family farmer. This family farmer has all the virtues we know: country life is clean, it builds healthy bodies and healthy minds. Presidents, potentates, and rulers of the earth have risen from the handles of the plow.

This image of the family-farmer has cloaked the transformation of family - farmer agriculture into agri-business. Agriculture became corporate agri-business with efficient machines, automation, financial combination, and interlocking, dehumanized and depersonalized production, shares, stock, and stock earning, and professional managerial and technical staffs.

The warm, earthy picture of family - farming has marked the transformation of agriculture into agri-business, America's largest industry, without the accompaniment or creation of one single new law to control it. Agri-business is free to recruit and use semi-slave labor, free to maintain and use wage-breakers and strike-breakers, free to operate without minimum wages, maximum hours, unemployment insurance and any of the social, ethical and financial controls society imposes on the rest of the industrial community. In so doing, it received, and still receives, federal and state aid.

The organizing effort (organizing of agricultural workers) has as a major task, if it is to succeed, the destruction of this false image of family-farmerism, and the identification of agri-business for what it is: ruthless, cold-blooded big business exploitation of people and the land.

The question is raised, and must be answered: how do you destroy that false image? Is this image as important as you say it is?

The answers to question 2 lie in Governor Brown's report on who torpedoed his program in the legislature. He identified the interests who successfully blocked the way. They also operated in Congress behind Landrum-Griffen.

The first question is answered thusly: we destroy this image by a systematic education campaign, aimed at the trade union movement, which has its own press, and at the general public. This takes the form of pictures, angle stories, filmstrips, movies, radio and TV programs and speeches to all possible groups, specialized treatment of research materials, the use of newsletters and all other media . . .

The financial, social and ideological structure of agri-business is built on cheap labor, upon some bracero concept whether it be Japanese, Filipino, Puerto Rican, or Mexican. No matter where you turn in America, agri-business claims the right and privilege of exception from minimum wage laws, of special status. It has achieved this state, we have seen, from doing a super-excellent selling job.

Let me reemphasize. Cheap labor underwrites agri-business. The displacement of American cheap labor by foreign cheap labor is the first step to cheapen all American labor. The stakes are just that big.

Agri-business has no central

We Only Heard

BY BILL RODGERS

TWO WEEKS ago we said that we hoped the Republicans, when they adopted their platform at their national convention, did not try to out Democrat the Democrats with promises to do everything for everyone.

WITH THE Republican platform now "on the record", it is clear that they did not do this, however, they came closer to the Democrat platform ideas than to the ideas that would have been expressed if the platform had been written by the conservative element of the party. (It is obvious that this conservative Republican element does not differ much in its basic thinking from the conservative element of the Democrat party.)

CENTRAL THEME of the Republican platform is that private enterprise should be allowed to take care of the economic and business development of the nation; that the federal government's job is to create an atmosphere favorable to economic growth. The Democrats' philosophy is that the federal government should move in with spending programs to create economic development. (This is a really basic point of difference.)

ALONG WITH this, Republicans favored a tight rein, through the federal reserve board, on money and credit in order to maintain a sound dollar through control of inflation and deflation; the Democrats favor a looser money policy. And it is evident that the Republicans see the necessity of "living within our means", the necessity of a balanced budget; the Democrats also favor a balanced budget unless it becomes more expedient to unbalance the budget through federal spending.

A GOOD example of the difference in party philosophies can be seen in the housing plank of the two platforms. Say the Republicans: government should provide an economic climate to encourage private enterprise to build more homes, with program to encourage flow of mortgage credit into private housing, and with emphasis on homes for middle and lower income families. Say the Democrats: Provide 2,000,000 middle and low income homes annually by offering federal credit at low interest, with loans repayable over a long period of time, and with low down payments.

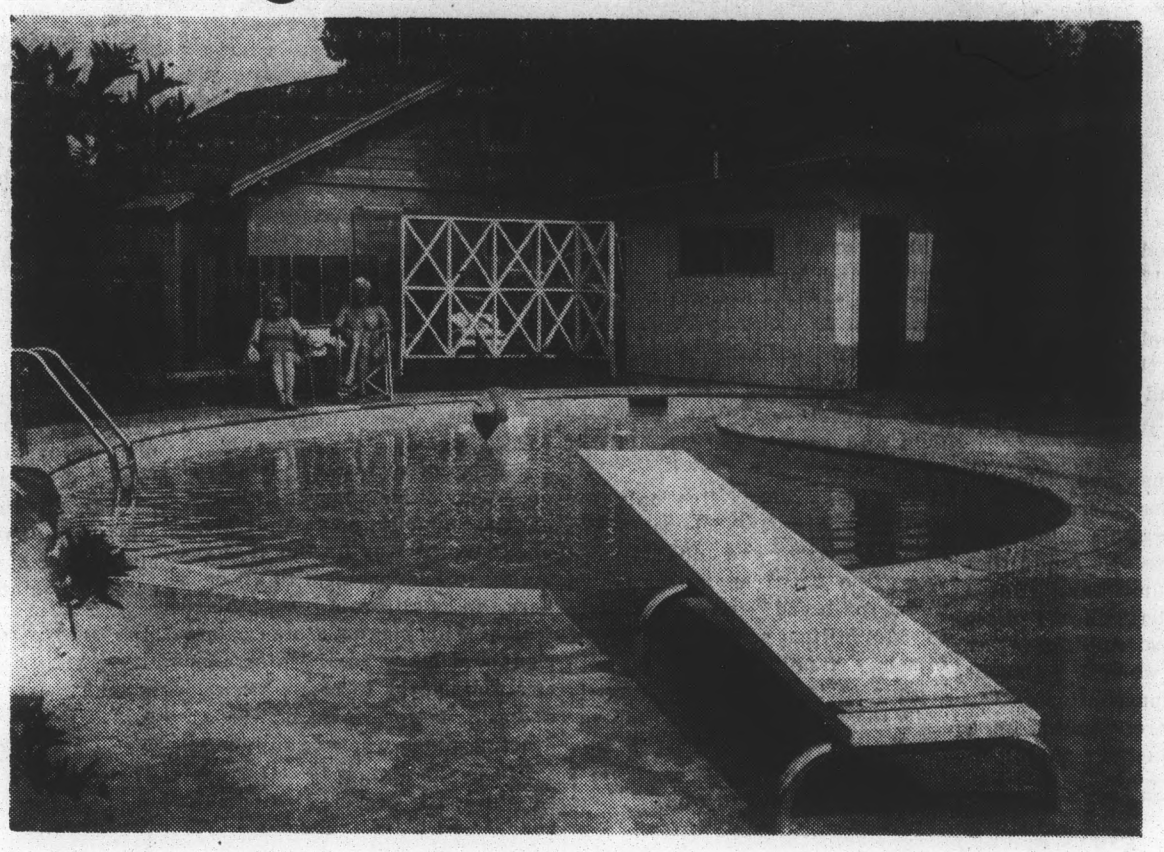

AS FOR agriculture, both parties favor building a stategic food reserve for an emergency; both favor distribution of surplus food to needy nations. But the Republicans favor a land retirement program to end overproduction and to raise farm prices in the market place, with a minimum of federal control of farmers. The Democrats favor bigger price support programs with production controls. (There will no doubt be considerable spelling out of farm policies as the presidential campaign progresses.)

REPUBLICANS FAVOR medical care for the aged through private health insurance programs for those who can afford them, federally aided state programs for those who cannot. The Democrats would tie medical care for the aged into the social security program.

BOTH PARTIES have "strong" civil rights platform planks. The Democrats say that schools should have three years to work out an integration plan; the Republicans reject this and say act now. The Democrats want a federal FEPC; the Republicans favor a commission on equal job opportunity. (All of which leaves the South no

CHAPEL CHIMES

By Rev. N. J. Thompson

A big dog saw a puppy chasing its tail and asked, "Why are you chasing your tail?"

The puppy explained, "I have mastered philosophy. I have learned that the best thing for a dog is happiness — and happiness is in my tail. Therefore I am chasing my tail."

The big dog answered, "My son, I too am a philosopher. I agree that happiness is a fine thing for a dog — and I have also found that happiness is in my tail. But I have observed that when I chase my tail it keeps running away from me. But when I go about my business, it comes after me."

Many folks are caught in a senseless circle, in their pursuit of happiness. Americans cram one billion dollars into juke boxes each year. Another billion goes for gum and candy, and 1½ billion for jewelry.

Too many of us live only for parties, movies, and television. We spend for booze and tobacco more than five times as much as we spend for bread! Gambling costs us $20 billion a year. Does all this buy happiness? Not at all! Happiness is a habit — an attitude toward life, an attitude toward God. The happiest people are those whose hearts, heads, and hands are devoted to God.

The happiness which Jesus Christ gives a man outlasts this life. It overflows into the great Hereafter. It becomes a river of delight, sparkling and crystal-clear, blessed of God for ever and ever. In that Paradise of God, the clink of cocktail glasses and juke boxes will not be heard. But golden harps and the angels' choir will blend with the happy song of the redeemed.

Youngsters Invited to Play Golf Free At Visalia

VISALIA, Aug. 4 — An invitation has been extended to Porterville youngsters, up to age 18 years, to play golf without charge on Monday through Friday, during the month of August on the Sierra View Public Golf course at Visalia.

The invitation was extended by Ralph Lomeli, professional at the course, and former professional at the Porterville municipal course.

YOUR LEGISLATOR AT WORK!

Senator
J. Howard Williams
32nd District
California State Legislature

"What price water?" is a twist of "What Price Glory?", the title of the famous play and movie about World War I. But it is also a very serious problem to all of us here in California, a problem which will plague state government and many local water agencies for months to come. Price is a basic factor involved in the drafting of contracts to supply water from the statewide water project to local agencies which can connect with its aqueducts.

A recent two-day hearing on water contracts held by the Assembly interim committee on water demonstrated unmistakably that the water topic still boils with controversy. Three different drafts of proposed contracts brought quite mixed reactions from committee members and representatives of interested groups.

Before these proposals were reviewed, the committee was reminded that under the terms of the water project law enacted in 1959, the Legislature is specifically authorized to prescribe terms and conditions for water contracts. Furthermore, the act provides that each contract is entered into for the direct benefit of the bond holders and that revenues derived from fulfillment of contracts are pledged to purposes stated in the law.

It was said that the drafts presented are the first comprehensive efforts to put words on paper to spell out agreements and commitments involved in the complex relations between the state, as builder and operator of the project, and local agency purchasing water. Therefore they cannot be regarded as final, nor necessarily satisfactory to all water agencies who might be involved. As drafts, they were submitted to the committee primarily to give it, the water agencies, and the general public an idea of progress on contracts to date, and of some of the problems involved. Actual contract negotiation is an administrative, not a legislative responsibility, it was pointed out.

First to review its draft contract was the metropolitan water district of southern California. The district urged signing of a contract before the November election, at which the $1.75 billion water bond issue will be voted on. Its draft called for a delivery of a firm 1.5 million acre feet per year at a fixed price, with permission to draw more if available. It would provide that no bonds be sold until contracts are made under which 75 percent of the capital cost of the projects would be repaid.

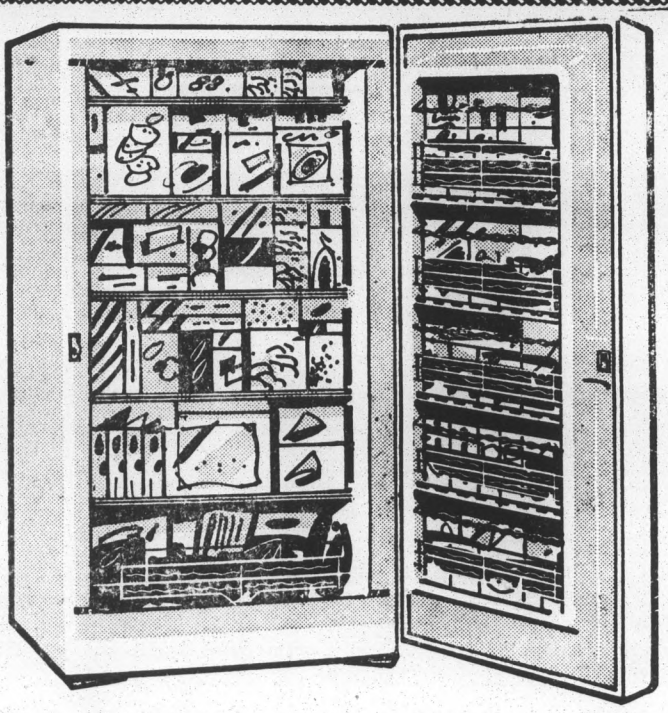

Spokesmen for the state department of water resources differed about the status of its draft. One referred to it as a "staff document only." Another said it is a "complete document", needing only filling in of blanks, and signatures to become effective. It provides for allocation of water available, acreage limitations based on price, the extent of state obligations under contracts, and for the time and method of repaying capital costs.

The draft contract submitted by the south bay aqueduct counties, Alameda, Contra Costa and Santa Clara, would provide for an annual lump sum payment by each to apply against the cost of distribution, for a fixed price per acre foot for water delivered to a county, and for the raising of any additional funds needed by a property tax in the area directly benefited.

Spokesmen for the southern water district vigorously attacked the proposed state contract. They objected to absence of firm guarantees for continuous delivery of water, to pricing the water on a quantity basis for cost of development, and to higher prices for water delivered to owners of more than 160 acres of land. One said the state's proposal would cost the south $70 to $80 million more per year.

SAFFLOWER EXPERIMENTAL PLOT AT TIPTON

By William R. Sallee
Farm Advisor

VISALIA, Aug. 4 — A 40-acre experimental project growing safflower, an oil crop, will be shown at a field meeting at 9:00 a.m. today. This extensive trial is located on the McCarthy Brothers ranch, three miles west of Tipton on Avenue 152.

Safflower oil is of high value in the paint and varnish industry and more recently has gained popular recognition as an edible oil for health reasons. These factors make the future of this crop look promising. The first year yields of this crop look good; the cost of production is slightly higher than growing grain crops in Tulare county.

Until recently this crop was not under irrigated conditions because of its high degree of susceptibility to root-rot. With the introduction of new improved varieties with resistance to this disease, it is being successfully grown in some areas of California under irrigation.

The purpose of the field experiment on the McCarthy ranch, conducted by the University of California Extension service, is to determine its adaptability to local conditions.

place to go with either party on this issue.)

ON EDUCATION, the Republicans emphasize local control of schools and local responsibility for schools; they say "yes" on federal school construction funds, but "no" on federal funds for teacher salaries, stating that federal payment of teachers means eventual federal control of schools. The Democrats favor federal money for both school construction and teacher salary, and indicate that in their opinion local school business is becoming federal school business.

ON THE issue of national defense, both parties agree that problems of the 60s will be different than problems of the 50s, and both believe a reappraisal of defense ideas and weapons is in order. The Democrats claim that America is now a second rate world power; the Republicans say, "not so," that America has no equal in military strength, and, during the convention, produced some convincing evidence to support this stand. Both parties agree that if world peace is to be maintained, America must be second to none in military strength.

LABOR PLANKS might be summarized by saying Republicans think in terms of wage earners as individuals; Democrats think in terms of labor leaders first, the "working man" second. Both parties support the principle of collective bargaining; both parties favor increasing amounts, and extending coverage of minimum wage and unemployment insurance. The Democrats pledge repeal of "right to work laws," and would cut out certain limitations on the right to strike and to picket.

ALL IN all, the wordy Democrat platform appears to promise a lot that cannot be delivered; the shorter Republican platform promises less, but is more realistic and practical.

BASICALLY, THE issue is still there — the big federal government philosophy of the Democrats, the more limited federal government philosophy of the Republicans. Of which, we'll personally take the latter.

WASHBURN

The water is low on all forks of the Tule river, and fishing is only fair for native trout. Continued weekly planting makes good fishing for catchables in the areas around Camp Wishon, Camp Nelson, and Cedar Slope.

From the pack stations at Quaking Aspen reports are that Little Kern is getting low, fishing fair to good. Big Kern very good anywhere above Kern Flats. Coyote lake good.

In the high country, reached from the Balch Park Pack station, Evalyn and Blossom lakes, good. Maggie Lakes heavily fished the last few weeks, only fair. Summit and Twin lakes poor. Streams low, fair to poor.

SPOTTED ALFALFA APHID, ARMYWORMS CAN BE STOPPED WITH A SINGLE APPLICATION OF ONE INSECTICIDE

By William R. Sallee
Farm Advisor

VISALIA, Aug. 4 — Damaging populations of Yellow-Striped Armyworms and Spotted Alfalfa Aphid are occurring in alfalfa fields simultaneously. Control of these pests with a single application of one insecticide is recommended.

When the armyworms are the major insect to be controlled, Dylox at the rate of eight ozs. per acre of the active ingredient is recommended. The waiting period between application and cutting is 14 days.

If the Spotted Alfalfa Aphid is the major insect to control and the armyworms are small, Malathion at the rate of 20 ozs. of active material can be used. Also, when there is not enough time to use Dylox because of the 14-day waiting period, Malathion may be substituted. Dylox gives better worm control than Malathion. Dylox, not ordinarily recommended for aphid control, should knock down the population to the point where natural enemies will take over and keep the aphids under control.

The Yellow-Striped Armyworm population will probably begin to decline within two weeks. However, it is possible to have the third brood; and growers are urged to watch their fields carefully for a new infestation.

SUNKIST GROWERS SAY "NO" ON PROPOSITION 15

LOS ANGELES, July 4 — The board of directors of Sunkist Growers has voted unanimously to oppose Proposition 15, the measure to reapportion the membership of the California Senate on the November ballot.

California, as is the case with most states, pattern its legislative elections after the Federal system whereby the lower house or Assembly is chosen on the basis of population and the upper house or Senate on a geographic basis, it is pointed out.

"Proposition 15 would reapportion the State Senate on neither basis but instead would create a completely arbitrary and divisive line, cutting California in two at a permanent and artificial point, north and south of which 20 State Senators would be chosen," F. R. Wilcox, Sunkist general manager. said.

"Our board of directors has rejected this concept in favor of retention of the traditional method of electing Senators and Assemblymen, and has instructed Sunkist management to work with other phases of agriculture and business which have also gone on record as opposing Proposition 15."

John Carr Member Of State Lands Commission

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4 — State Controller Alan Cranston has been elected chairman of the State Lands commission. He succeeds Lieutenant Governor Glenn M. Anderson, who has served as chairman for the past year.

The third member is the state Director of Finance, John Carr, (formerly of Porterville.) The Lands commission administers all state-owned public lands, including oil-bearing lands that lie off the Southern California coast.

nervous system, no "jugular vein." It has power, and maintains that power, through its money, its intimidative capabilities, through its system of alliances and fronts, and through brute force.

Despite this toughness, it is nebulous, vague. This is important to us. Past organizing efforts in other fields could readily identify the adversary and define the problem. In the mines, the plants, the construction jobs, the service industries, and even in public offices, there was a jugular vein — if it was a fence, a building and doors, a tipple, an office, or even words on pieces of paper — laws. This provided a framework for the organizing effort; you aim at an NLRB (National Labor Relations Board) election, or a nose-count, or a strike, or a picket line, or an agreement or contract . . .

Our target is harder to pinpoint. It is diffused, although it has concentrations and associations. These latter can be "dissolved" faster than you can keep track of them. There is no framework in a business scattered over 150,000 square miles.

If there is no framework as such, no rallying point, no heart, we must create that framework. Our presence is already strengthening the growers associations — we are forcing them to organize. This provides a part of the framework. We provide the other part of the framework by our program.

In setting this program into motion, our only inflexible rule should be that we remain flexible.

We should also reexamine the battleground in the light of our probings. Do we shift forces, regroup, shorten our lines, or enlarge the battlefield? . . .

Building the framework. 1. The organization and training of the staff. This is a continuous, long term process.

2. The organization and training of volunteer organizers. This is a continuous, long term staff activity in which each organizer builds and trains his own groups of volunteer organizers.

3. The organization and indoctrination of the rank and file. This is a continuous staff and volunteer organizer operation. It involves pre-conditioning for the smear attacks we must expect, using the rank and file daily in the pressure attacks on P. L. 78 (public law 78 by which foreign laborers are now secured by farmers) regulations, and officials, and hardening our leadership cadre.

4. The attack on Public Law 78 and related regulations. This is a continuous staff, volunteer organizer and rank and file operation. This is a frontal attack on agribusiness. This requires special direction and attention.

5. The educating and servicing of community groups. This is a continuous staff, volunteer organizer and rank and file operation. It aims at minority group and community penetration by making the union indispensable in their lives through aids in securing welfare, medical and legal aid, housing, etc.

6. The education of and cooperation with civic and business community groups. This is a continuous staff, volunteer organizer and rank and file operation. It aims at creating the climate necessary for acceptance or organization among those who are onlookers, but who can help. It involves educational and research materials of all types: data, speeches, films, articles, conversations, etc., all done consciously and deliberately, aimed at the particular audience involved.

7. The education of and cooperation with small growers and family farmers. This is a continuous staff, volunteer organizer and rank and file operation. It is aimed at giving aid and comfort to small growers and family farmers. It is aimed at dividing the ranks of the opposing forces. It is aimed at destroying agri-business image of "family-farmerism" by showing who the family farmer really is.

8. The mounting of a political action program. This is a continuous staff, volunteer organizer, and rank and file operation. Register our people. Get them active politically. Get out the vote.

. . . The time has come to settle down to work.

irrigation water can be controlled and spread out during the summer for benefit of Pioneer Water company users.

Ultimately, a long-term contract will be worked out with the bureau, Hilton said, but at present, the anticipated 1961 contract will be on a one-year basis.

While Success dam is basically a flood control project, under the U.S. Army engineers, the bureau of reclamation will administer irrigation aspects. It is estimated that about nine per cent of the cost of the dam, and of opereration, will be charged to irrigation benefit.

NO HUNTING FOR SAGE GROUSE

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4 — Because brood counts are below normal, there will be no hunting of sage grouse this season. Although, technically, a season is listed, the fish and game commission has established a zero bag limit.

FOUR SPECIAL DEER HUNTS GET APPROVAL IN TULARE COUNTY FOR FALL MONTHS; DRAWINGS ARE SET

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4 — Special deer hunts this fall in four Tulare county areas are included among 35 antlerless and either-sex deer hunts in 17 counties that have been approved by the California Fish and Game commission.

A proposed Inyo county elk hunt has been turned down by the commission.

In the Mineral King area of Tulare county, 200 deer can be taken between September 29 and October 4 in an either-sex hunt; 800 antlerless deer can be taken in the Monache country from September 27 through November 26; 100 antlerless deer can be taken in a lower Kern river area shoot, and 500 from the Greenhorn country, with seasons being September 27 - November 3.

A total of 14,875 permits will be issued by a state-wide drawing. To be eligible for the drawing for most hunts, sportsmen must apply on official application blanks attached to their 1960 deer tags.

"Send no money with your application form", the Department of Fish and Game says. Successful permittees will be notified after the drawing to send $5.00 for their permit. Of the 35 hunts approved, public drawings will be held for 30. Three of the remaining five will be held on military reservations. The San Emidio antlerless hunt in Kern county will be on a first-come, first-served basis, with permits being issued at the Bakersfield Fair grounds (upon surrender of the application attached to the 1960 deer tags) on August 26, September 2, September 9 and September 16 starting at 9 a.m. Permit fee is $2.00. In the other hunt — Los Angeles County Archery Deer hunt — archers must use their "B" tags. There will be no drawing for the Los Angeles archery hunt.

The deadline for applications for most hunts is September 13 and the statewide drawing September 16.

Each person may file one application and may indicate his first and second choice of hunts by name. As many as four persons may file for the same hunt as a party by mailing their application in one envelope. Applicants must be 12 years or older and must possess a valid 1960-61 hunting license.

Local Men Pass Civil Engineer License Examination

PORTERVILLE, Aug. 4 — Richard L. Schafer and Robert K. Bellue, engineers employed by the firm of Stetson, Strauss & Dresselhaus, have been notified by the Board of Registration for Civil and Professional Engineers that they have passed the examination for registration as Civil Engineers.

This was the first time either Engineer had taken the examination and since an average of only eight to 10 per cent pass the examination on the first attempt.

Bellue was recently transferred from the Porterville office to the Los Angeles office of Stetson, Strauss & Dresselhaus. The firm also has offices in Oceanside.

SPRING PIG CROP DOWN 16 PER CENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4 — Spring pig crop totalled 49.1 million head nationally this year, down 16 per cent from the 1959 figure.

From Daybell Nursery By John

According to the Nursery Association all nurseries experience summer doldrums. Everybody's off fishing, swimming, or just loafing. These last are probably bachelors. The fishermen and swimmers are considered beyond help but the loafers are considered fair game. This is because "Shade is for loafing." Anyone who doesn't have a nice leafy shade tree around will be hard pressed to find a cool spot to loaf in.

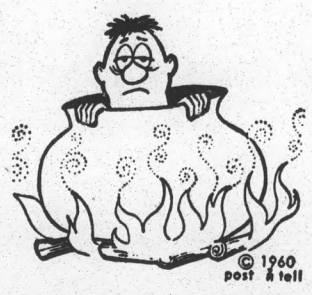

Therefore we are promoting tall, cool, leafy shade trees. Next to tall, cool leafy drinks, these are the answer to summer. They are really very versatile objects and we know of nothing selling for four seventy-five which can do so much for a yard.

First and most important, they provide shade. With the addition of a little water they provide more shade each year. In later years they are a regular garden closet. You can hang flowering baskets, old garden hose, and sprinklers from the branches. You can also lean tools, old boards, bicycles and yourself up against the trunk.

Some trees come equipped with flowers. This is not considered an extra and there is no additional charge. A few specially selected varieties provide healthful recreation for the wife in the fall. Gives her a chance to get outdoors stacking leaves and such. Come see your shady dealer on "E" Street north of Olive. Shady parking provided seven days a week.

WHAT DOCTORS SAY ABOUT

● Gum-Swallowing

Q. Does hard mental work shorten life?

A. Apparently not. Swedish doctors made a study of 2000 persons engaged in various occupations and concluded that mental work, such as university professors undertake, does not shorten life. Nor does mental work increase the tendency to brain tumor, or strokes, according to these doctors.

Q. What harm would result if someone accidentally swallowed chewing gum?

A. Medical records fail to mention harm experienced due to gum-swallowing. It is difficult to conceive of any unpleasant effects from the occasional, accidental swallowing of chewing gum.

Haughton Story

kept bachelor cabin, and he stopped at Gaffney's on his way to town and told him the news. John's reaction was "Sure, and he's probably in Hell right now a-yellin' and shootin' at my pigs."

Haughton's place has often been referred to as "the Coburn dump," because it was the lumber drying yard at the lower end of Coburn's flume. After Haughton's death, his property was bought by the Gill family, but it was found that the land he had actually owned was not where his improvements were. A man named Northrup therefore homesteaded the improved property. Several of Northrup's children are buried there in the picturesque cemetery site visible from the road. Pete Planchon (his son Bill was Northrup's son-in-law), and Jake Garner were later owners of this ranch, and it is now operated by the Ratzlaff family as a productive apple orchard.

There are other caves in the Mountain Home area, but only one or two have ever been entered. An undated clipping in the Visalia library tells of Alf Powell running a prospecting tunnel into "a labyrinth" of limestone caves in that area and taking out what appeared to be silver ore. This was probably the one now called the Galena Cave. The exact location is unknown but it is supposed to be on Maggie Mountain in the south side of the Silver Creek drainage. A man named Bill Rose is also said to have discovered it.

There is an old mine shaft, now caved in, on the north side of Silver Creek that also could have been a cave entrance. "Sinks" above Shake Camp show that the roofs of underground caverns have collapsed in that area at various times in the past.

SECOND CASE OF BAT RABIES IS CONFIRMED

VISALIA, Aug. 4 — A second case of bat rabies this year has been discovered in Tulare county, announces George Cox, health department director of sanitation. Mrs. Oral Gannaway of 33605 Road 222 near Woodlake recently found the bat fighting with the family dog and cats, a most peculiar way for a bat to act.

Kenneth Jernigan, director of the local public health laboratory, examined the brain of the bat and under microscope found the typical negri bodies of rabies. These were confirmed by the State Health Department Laboratory in Berkeley and the Gannaways authorized the local healht department to dispose of their bitten animals.

No humans were involved in this case but last April an 8 year old boy in Porterville was bitten by a bat and had to have the Pasteur treatment to protect against rabies.

Rabies can best be prevented, reports the health department, by immunizing the animal most likely to transmit it to humans, the pet dog.

Under State law, Tulare county will now be declared a Rabies area. All pet dogs over four months of age will have to be vaccinated against rabies. Last day of vaccination and licensing for year 1960-61 is August 31st. After that there is an additional $1.00 penalty. In view of these two recent cases of bat rabies, all Tulare county dog owners are advised to have their pet vaccinated. This can be done by any veterinarian.

fires and to be aware of the fire hazard at all times.

Because much of the deer range in the early season is located on private property, the department also urged all hunters to respect rights of the landowners and to conduct themselves so that landowner-hunter relations will continue to improve. Only with improvement of the landowner-sportsmen relations on a person-to-person basis can hunters expect to overcome their access problem, the agency noted.

In the southern San Joaquin valley, early season will be open in the western areas of Merced, Stanislaus, Fresno, Kings and Kern counties.

Cancer Society Complimented For Surpassing Quota

VISALIA, Aug. 4 — Tulare county's 1,160 volunteer workers who helped the Tulare County Branch of the American Cancer society top its $28,075 Cancer crusade goal have been commended by Marshall P. Madison, state crusade chairman for the California division of the ACS, in a letter addressed to Dr. Ivan Crookshanks, crusade chairman for Tulare county.

The July 15 progress report of the Tulare County branch showed a total of $28,301 contributed with 17 areas exceeding their quotas.

Highway Cruiser

plumbing, heating and electrical wiring.

There is no question but that a house trailer, or the pickup cab that includes living quarters, comes under the jurisdiction of the housing authority, however, the sportscab of the Highway Cruiser type that so many farmers now have, represents an accessory, it is maintained, not a vehicle, and is not designed for human habitation, except as an occasional covering on outings. And it has no heating or plumbing, only dome lights similar to a car or station wagon.

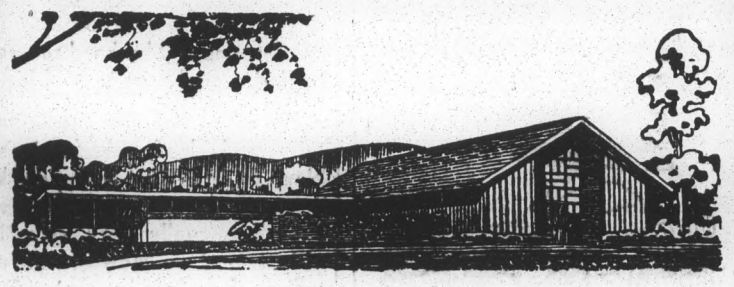

In order to enforce the license charge, the state is "red tagging" the Highway Cruiser at its retail outlets, which doesn't exactly add to the sales appeal. And the state has moved for a change of venue on the case from Tulare county to Sacramento — easier for the state, tougher for Conley.

Representing Conley is Bob Natzke, Porterville attorney, who has petitioned the state to refrain from further molesting the Highway Cruiser manufacturer with an inspection fee that is not applicable.
